SET FIRE TO CLOTHING CHILD BURNS TO DEATH

Little Dorris Evaline Garbrick Victim of Innocence.

HAD MATCHES IN BED

When Mother Rushed into Room She Found Bed in Flames and Child's Body Burned to Crisp—Where Matches Came From a Mystery.

Unable to escape from a bed which caught fire from matches, little Dorris Evaline Garbrick, the twenty-one-months old adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip F. Garbrick, was burned to death on Tuesday morning at Coleville. The child's screams attracted the attention of Mrs. Garbrick, who was in the yard in the rear of the house, but by the time she had reached the bedroom the flames had burned the little body to a crisp.

In the charred bedclothing were the remnants of burned matches telling the origin of the tragedy. It is supposed that the matches had been left on a washstand, which stood adjoining the bed. Streaks on the wall, against which the bed had been placed, completed the explanation of the origin of the fire. How the matches happened to be left on the stand is more than can be explained by Mr. and Mrs. Garbrick, who were overcome with grief on learning of the child's death.

When Mrs. Garbrick went into the yard the child was asleep. The bed was placed against a wall. and with the sides up to prevent the child falling out. Mrs. Garbrick noticed no trace of smoke and did not know of the fire until her attention was attracted by the child's cries. She ran into the house and up to the child's room, where to her horror she saw that the bed was a mass of flames. Without thought of danger to herself, she seized the burning bedclothing and ran back into the yard, where there was a hydrant. When she turned on the water, the charred clothing fell apart, revealing the child's body burned to a crisp.

Mr. and Mrs. Garbrick have no children. Two children blessed their union, but both died. They then adopted the child which was burned to death.

ROBERT SPEER ON MISSIONS

His Address Last Night Interesting Feature of Women's Meeting.

An address last night by Robert E. Speer, of New York, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, was an interesting feature of the first day's session of the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the Huntingdon Presbytery. The sessions continue over today.

A large number of delegates are in attendance, representing a score or more of towns in the several counties embracing the district. Owing to delayed trains yesterday upward of seventy delegates were several hours late in arriving in Bellefonte, and the opening meeting was not called to order until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Afternoon features included an especially interesting address by Mrs. E. B. Weitzel, Synodical, Presbyterial and Auxiliary Secretary of the Philadelphia Board, and a "devotional hour," conducted by Rev. J. Alvin Orr, of Philadelphia.

Last night Mr. Speer more than pleased the large crowd which was present to hear him talk on foreign missions. He vividly portrayed the hunger of the heathen world for guidance and emphasized the fact thata wonderful opportunity presents itself to the world to make possible such guidance by further extending the missionary work.

Carpenters to Banquet.

The Bellefonte lodge, Local Union 1190, Carpenters and Joiners of America, will hold their eighth annual banquet on next Tuesday evening at Bruce Garbrick's restaurant. The fact that the carpenters have the affair in hand is sufficient guarantee that it will be a pleasing success.

Keep 'em on for a Few Days.

The United States Weather Bureau, at Washington, last night sent out a bulletin predicting much colder weather in the East. A severe storm, with much colder weather, has been sweeping through the West for the last three days.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Helen White, to Harlan Peabody, of Columbus, Ohio. The wedding is planned for the middle of July. Mr. Peabody is a civil engineer and during the summer of 1908 was in Bellefonte in charge of the corps making a geological survey of Cente County.

ORCHARD DATES CHANGED

New Scheduled Arranged for Inspections in Centre County.

State Zoologist Surface has announced a change in the schedule of orchard inspections in Centre County. The new schedule of inspections follows:

Monday, April 4, orchard of Newton Neidigh, near State College.

Wednesday, April 6, orchard of J. J. Arney, near Centre Hall.

Friday, April 8, orchard of Col. W. Fred Reynolds, near Bellefonte.

All meetings will be held in the afternoon. Should the weather prove unfavorable they will be postponed to the following day.

These meetings will afford residents of Centre county an opportunity to see the most approved methods of horticultural management and suppression of insect pests and fungous diseases that damage and destroy fruits and trees. Professor Surface expects to attend one or more of the meetings in this county. At each meeting two experts, at least, from the Division of Zoology of the State Department of Agriculture will be present to give practical instruction.

A section of the orchard in which these public meetings will be held will be conducted as a permanent Model Orchard and at the first meeting trees will be pruned, sprayed, and perhaps planted, insect pests and fungous diseases identified, different types of apparatus shown, and lectures delivered and questions answered. Everybody interested in fruit culture and in saving the trees from injury, whether by insects or diseases, should attend the meetings nearest his home; and, also, take with him specimens of pests for identification. It is understood that any questions asked as to such pests and on orchard management will be cheerfully answered.

WANT A STATE ROAD

Petition for Highway on Old Agricultural Turnpike to College.

A petition has been filled with and indorsed by the County Commissioners, and forwarded to the State Highway Department, at Harrisburg, for the construction of a State road near State College. It is expected that the State Highway Department will send an inspector to go over the proposed route in the next week or ten days.

The proposed route covers a distance of about five miles, beginning a short distance west of Peru station, on the line between Benner and College townships, to a point on the old agricultural turnpike road, between State College borough and College township. The friends of the movement are enthusiastic over the prospect of securing for that section of the county one of the best roads to be had and at a minimum cost to the taxpayers.

Hospital Notes.

Maslin Wilcox, son of Rev. Dr. T. S. Wilcox, admitted for operation: doing nicely.

Oliver Witmer, Bellefonte; admitted with infected arm.

Mrs. Amelia Sligle, Madisonburg; admitted for operation.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jodon, of Bellefonte, a son.

William Caldron, of Pleasant Gap; Mrs. Lizzie Petters, of Fillmore; Master Hugh Wilson, of Warriors-Mark, and Mrs. Sara Shope, of Milesburg, discharged as cured.

Thanks to the public schools of Centre Hall and the Parochial school for their generous donation of 46 dozen of eggs, 11 bushels of potatoes, vegetables, fruits butter, etc.

Ambulance Dedicated.

The ambulance, which was recently purchased for the Bellefonte Hospital, out of the proceeds of a home talent entertainment that was given last winter, was officially dedicated on Saturday last at the Hospital grounds. Rev. John Hewitt made the presentation speech and W. Harrison Walker made the response in behalf of the trustees. After the vehicle had been thoroughly inspected, James H. Potter took the reins, and drove the ambulance, and the ladies that were mainly instrumental in getting it, on a triumphal tour of the town. The ladies were Mrs. John N. Lane, Mrs. James H. Potter and Mrs. W. L. Daggett.

The ambulance is painted in dark blue and presents a fine appearance.

New Officers Installed.

The Philipsburg Camp of Woodmen of the World installed the following officers on last Saturday night: Consul Commander, C. C. Wilson; Advisor Lieutenant, T. G. McCausland; Clerk, James Haworth; Banker, C. G. Avery; Physician, C. E. McGirk; Escort, T. J. Eboch; Watchman, John Shontz; Sentry, R. D. Bigelow; Managers, S. R. Thompson; Geo. Richards, Jerry Farber.

THREE HORSES BURNED BY FIRES IN "BARRENS"

Live-stock of George B. Thompson, at Alto, Destroyed.

MUCH TIMBER DAMAGED

Flames Which Started Near Waddle, Checked After Sweeping Over Large Area—Hundreds of Men and College Students Gave Aid.

Forest fires have caused considerable damage in Centre county in the last ten days. As a result of a spark from fires in the "barrens", near Alto, the stock shed owned by George B. Thompson was destroyed on Friday, last, three valuable horses being burned. Mr. Thompson rescued two colts from the burning shed. He was painfully burned about the head and neck and was forced to leave the shed before all of his stock could be taken out. A cow and a calf owned by Andrew Dubbs also were burned.

The fire started in the vicinity of Waddle on timber land owned by the Thompson estate. Before the flames could be checked they had swept over a considerable area. Hundreds of men, including many State College students, aided in the work of fighting the fire, the flames only being stopped by means of back-fires started at a number of points.

The fire was first discovered by persons residing near the Thompson sawmill, but the heavy smoke soon attracted the attention of nearby-farmers, who hurried to the scene and quickly organized a volunteer force of firemen. The flames had already gained great headway and the force of men at hand was too small to prevent further spreading.

A call for help was sent to State College and upward of three hundred students and business men responded, automobiles, wagons and hacks being pressed into service and a quick run made to the scene of the trouble. Meanwhile the flames had continued to spread, endangering farm buildings and other property. It was while the men from State College were hurrying to the fire that the Thompson barn and livestock were burned.

Joining forces with those on the ground the State College men went to work with a will and fought the flames along systematic lines. Back-fires were started and these served to check the main body of flames.

One party, including a number of students and men residing on near-by farms, had a narrow escape from being burned. They were so busily engaged in checking the advancement of the flames that they failed to notice a blaze in the rear which threatened to cut them off from all avenues to safety. Fortunately one of the party happened to notice the danger and all quickly ran to a clearing where they were in no danger.

The fire started about 11 o'clock in the morning and it was not until 10 o'clock that night that the flames had been checked and smothered.

On Saturday morning a call for help was received at State College, it being reported that the farm property of John Wolf was in danger. A prompt response averted serious damage. Another call for help was received about noon on Saturday, this time the blaze being at State College. Flames were discovered in the small strip of woods adjoining the Agricultural Building. Students and residents of the town lost no time in responding and the flames were soon extinguished. The prompt discovery and efficient work of the firemen prevented a disastrous blaze, the flames being for a time within fifty or sixty yards of the residences of Professors Jackson, Gardner and Diemer.

The view from State College, while the "barrens" were on fire was thrilling and attracted large crowds of spectators. The loss to the owners of the timber destroyed has not been estimated.

Too much credit cannot be given the men who aided in extinguishing the fires.

Milk Wagon in Collision.

H. D. Rearick's new horse ran off on Monday morning and badly smashed up his milk wagon. The horse took fright at something that lay on the road near Aiken's corner and started to run up Bishop street. At the Haag House it tried to turn into the stable and smashed the milk wagon up against the fence.

Mr. Stitzer Taken Ill.

While attending the Easter services at the Lutheran church, H. Y. Stitzer was suddenly overcome by a queer sensation in his head and had to be assisted home. He is now resting easier.

FIGHTING NEW ASSESSMENTS

South Ward Property Owners to Appeal Against Heavy Increases.

Dr. J. M. Brockerhoff and other property owners in the South ward are planning a vigorous fight against the returns of the assessors for Bellefonte borough. They will appear before the County Commissioners on Saturday, when a meeting will be held to hear appeals.

Dr. Brockerhoff's anger is directed against Assessor Paul D. Fortney, the Democratic assessor in the South ward. The returns by the assessors for the three wards in Bellefonte shows an increased valuation of approximately $60,000, with upward of approximately $52,000 of this amount made up in the South ward. One-third or more of the increase in this ward was returned on properties of the Brockerhoff estate, including the Brockerhoff House, Temple Court, the Brockerhoff residence on Bishop Street, and the large building occupied by C. Y. Wagner for his flour and grain store.

According to Dr. Brockerhoff, the properties of the Brockerhoff estate and of F. W. Crider have been made to bear almost one-half of the total increase in the assessed valuation, or approximately $29,000, while these two with the properties of W. F. Reynolds, the T. R. Reynolds estate, Garmans, Josephs and the Bush estate represent over $50,000 of the $60,000 increase.

The assessed valuation in the South ward in 1909 was $525,525, as compared with $580,700 in 1910; that of the North ward, $817,403, in 1909, as compared with $823,358, in 1910, and that in the West ward, $213,750, in 1909, as compared with $215,750, in 1910.

MINISTERS TO ORGANIZE

Meeting of Clergymen is Called Here on Monday, April 4.

A movement has been inaugurated for the formal organization of an association of all the ministers of Centre county. A meeting with this end in view has been called for Monday, April 4, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Rev. C. W. Winey issued the following call:

"At the request of some of the ministeriums of Centre county an urgent call is extended to all clergymen of the county to meet in conference on Monday, April 4, at 10 o'clock A. M. in the Presbyterian chapel, Bellefonte, to discuss vital interests of the kingdom of God. Luncheon will be served at the Y. M. C. A. Kindly inform me not later than April 1 whether you will be present.

"C. W. WINEY,
Secretary."

Slight Wreck Near Julian

A Pennsylvania freight train broke down near Julian yesterday, delaying the east bound noon passenger train almost two hours. Quite a number of delegates to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society convention and also many State College students were on the delayed train. General Manager F. H. Thomas, of the Bellefonte Central Railroad, who always endeavors to take care of the students, very thoughtfully provided a special train for them on their arrival at Bellefonte, and in this manner they were enabled to reach the college without waiting in Bellefonte over night.

Writes of His World Trip.

Harris Franck, a former teacher of modern languages at the Bellefonte Academy, has just had published by the Century Co., of New York, a 400-page book, which gives a detailed account of how he made a trip around the world on the capital of one kodak and a suit of clothes. The book is finely printed and is profusely illustrated. In the preface of the book, the author mentions his former connection wtth the Bellefonte Academy and pays a fine tribute to the "School on the Hill."

Laymen Meet at Sunbury.

The Central Convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Reformed church in the United States will be held at Sunbury, April 12 and 13. The opening session will be held at 2 o'clock, Wednesday, April 12. St. John's Reformed church, of Bellefonte, has elected the following delegation to represent the congregation: Messrs. A. Lukenbach, E. E. Ardery, C. Y. Wagner, C. T. Gerberich, A. C. Mingle, George Hazel and the pastor, Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt.

Horticultural Meeting at College.

The last meeting of the season of the Centre County Horticultural Society will be held at State College on the afternoon and evening of Friday, April 8. In the evening a joint meeting with the College Horticultural Club will be held, with addresses by Professor R. L. Watts, Professor C. E. Myers and J. P. Stewart.

EASTER SERVICES IN BELLEFONTE CHURCHES

Special Programs Rendered and Large Crowds Attend.

IDEAL WEATHER REIGNS

Churches Thronged at all Services—Special Choir Rendered "The Crucifixion" on Cood Friday at St. John's P. E. Church.

Easter was appropriately acclaimed in all the Bellefo te Churches. Every congregation surpassed all previous efforts in the glorification of this hallowed anniversary.

In connection with the Good Friday services a special choir at St. John's Protestant Episcopal choir gave a sacred meditation cantata entitled "The Crucifixion," on Friday evening. The wonderful rendition of this majestic cantate reflected great credit on the participants and conductor, Miss Mary Bradley. The soloists were Harry P. Armstrong, of State College, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Russell Blair. The church was thronged with visitors during the services.

The morning prayer-book service on Easter was also the occasion for special music. Communion services were conducted by Rev. John Hewitt.

The Presbyterian Easter program consisted of two services; a morning service and an evening praise service. The morning service was interspersed with solos by Messrs. Armstrong and Beattie, two anthems by the choir and a special sermon by Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts. The evening praise service consisted of solos by Messrs. Armstrong and Beattie, and Mrs. J. C. Meyer, a duet by Mr. Beattie and Dr. Platts and four anthems by the choir. The church was beautifully decorated, which was due to the untiring efforts of Miss Helen Overton, chairman of the Decoration Committee.

The Reformed Church's Easter communion service was the best attended in the history of the congregation, the benevolent offering alone amounting to $117.00. The church was very prettily decorated, while one of the features of the morning service was a duet by Mrs. Schmidt and Miss Lulu Harper. The evening service was conducted by the Sunday School. The self-denial envelopes of the scholars amounted to over $30.

Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt received five adult members into the church by confirmation and one adult by baptism.

At St. John's Catholic church Easter was celebrated with the two regular Sunday morning services. One of the most pleasing features of the second service was a beautiful solo by Miss Agnes Gherrity. The decorations of the church were very pretty and have since been the subject of much favorable comment.

The Methodist church was very prettily decorated for the Easter festival. The one feature of the day was the evening Sunday School Missionary service, in which there was a varied program of singing and recitations.

The Lutherans started Easter with a very well attended early morning service, which began at 6 o'clock. During the usual morning service, three members were confirmed, four were received by letter while the communion service was the largest in the last four years. The evening service was conducted by the Sunday School. A newly formed choir of between 40 and 50 voices, under the leadership of W. R. Harp, formerly of Williamsport, but now of Bellefonte, sang at both the morning and the evening service and will become a permanent chorus for all future services.

The United Brethren church also held early morning services. Two other services were held throughout the day and both were very well attended.

The United Evangelical Church held the usual Sunday services on Easter.

Fire Destroyed Home.

On Friday last the large frame dwelling house of Samuel Fravel, who resides about one mile and a quarter below Jacksonville, was completely destroyed by fire. Luckily the live stock and the implements had been sold off at public sale a week previous, so that only the house and a few out-buildings were burned. All the household effects were ruined. The loss is estimated at about $600, fully covered by insurance.

Fire at Monument.

A fire at Monument on Friday, last, completely destroyed the home of Samuel Herr. Everything in the house, including the clothing of Mr. Herr and his brother and sister, was burned. It is supposed that the fire was caused by a defective flue.

GEORGE VALENTINE DEAD

Former Prominent Resident of Bellefonte Dies in Maryland.

George Valentine, for many years a a prominent resident of Bellefonte, died on Saturday, last, at his late home at Ruxton, Maryland. He had been ill but a short time. News of his death was received here during the day and evoked expressions of sorrow among a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The body was brought to Bellefonte on Sunday and interment made on Monday morning. Funeral services were held at the residence of Mrs. Jacob D. Valentine and the interment was at the Friends burial ground. The pallbearers at the house were survivors of the old workmen of the Valentine Company Iron Works. At the grave the pall bearers were the following nephews of the deceased: George, Joseph and Charles Fox, of Philadelphia; Thomas Downing, of Chester county, and George Valentine and a cousin, Harry C. Valentine, of Bellefonte.

George Valentine was born in Bellefonte, August 6, 1834, at the old Valentine homestead, at the corner of High and Spring Streets, now occupied by the family of his brother, the late Jacob D. Valentine. He was the son of George Valentine, the head of the original firm of Valentine & Co., which started in business here in 1815. His mother was Mary Drinker Downing, of Philadelphia. He received his education at the Bellefonte Academy, the Friends School, at West-town, and also at Haverford College. He then entered the service of his father at the Valentine Iron Works, starting at the beginning and working his way through the successive positions until he had attained a thorough mastery of the business.

In the early fifties the old firm retired in favor of the new one, which consisted of Mr. Valentine, his two brothers, Jacob D. and Reuben B., and his cousins, Robert and Abraham. Mr. Valentine continued actively in this business until June, 1886, when the works were sold. He continued to be interested, however, in the same business until 1897. He held numerous positions of trust in his native town, filling all with ability and fidelity, his service being such as to command the respect and confidence of all with whom he came into contact. He was at different times a member of Council and member of the School Board and for many years he was president of the Electric Light Company.

About seventeen years ago he removed to Ruxton, Maryland, where he resided until the time of his death. He was married, in 1865, to Emily Jacobs, of Chester county, by whom he is survived; also four daughters: Jane H., Mary D., Sarah W. and Emily J., of Ruxton, Maryland.

MRS. LETITIA POULTNEY SMITH.

Mrs. Letitia Poultney Smith, widow of Jacob V. Thomas, died at her home in Philadelphia at one o'clock Tuesday morning, after a few weeks illness, in the eighty third year of her life. She was a member of a prominent Philadelphia family and married Mr. Thomas in 1848. Soon after her marriage they came to Bellefonte, which was their home until the death of her husband, in 1895. She then moved to Philadelphia in order to be near her sisters, and had just made arrangements to return to Bellefonte to spend the remainder of her life when the final illness overtook her. Of her five children, one, Richard, died about twenty years ago, and the others, Mrs. Charles Shaffner, of Philadelphia, Mrs. James B. Lane, Clifford S. Thomas, and Miss Mary S. Thomas survive her. During her life in Bellefonte, Mrs. Thomas made many friends and, notwithstanding her long absence and her enfeebled health during later years, she had kept so much in touch with the interests here that she will be pleasantly remembered by many of our townspeople.

CHARLES WILLIAMS.

A sad death was that of Charles Williams, the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore G. Williams, of Howard, who was taken to the Lock Haven hospital last Friday evening for an operation for intestinal obstruction. Peritonitis developed and death ensued at 1 o'clock Saturday morning. The funeral was held on Tuesday morning, interment being made in Unionville.

MRS. CRETIA ROSE HAZEL.

Mrs. Cretia Rose Hazel, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Spring Creek, died at the home of her son, Michael Hazel, in Spring Creek, on Saturday morning, death being due to infirmities of old age. The deceased was born February 14, 1846, in Elsas, Germany, and emigrated to America when nine years old. When she was fifteen years old her family moved from St. Marys, Pa., to Spring Creek, where

HEALTH FORCES DEFEAT DEATH

Thirteen Thousand Five Hundred Lives Saved in Two Years.

SHOWS ENORMOUS GAIN

Three Million Dollars Spent In Conservation of Public Health Shows a Saving of Twenty-Three Million Dollars to the Commonwealth — Diphtheria, Typhoid and Tuberculosis Give Way Before the Steady Advance of State's Health Officers.

The precious lives of thousands of little children have been spared because the state in its wise beneficence has furnished diphtheria antitoxin to the poor.

Typhoid fever is killing 2500 less people per year in Pennsylvania than it did four years ago.

Tuberculosis now claims 1000 lives less a year in this state.

Education and co-operation of the people in health matters, backed by vigorous support of the public press, is helping Commissioner Dixon to win out in war against disease.

Industries seek states where health records show low death rate.

In the last five years the state of Pennsylvania has been engaged in conservation work of an extremely important and fundamental kind. With President Roosevelt it believes that the preservation of the people's natural resources should begin with the preservation of the people themselves. The public cannot conscientiously permit the wasteful sacrifice of its forests and its other forms of natural wealth, but even less conscientiously can it permit the wantom sacrifice of its children's lives.

In maintaining a fully equipped state health department and engaging on a large scale in this great warfare against disease, Pennsylvania has taken a foremost stand for real modern civilization. The creation of governmental agencies for the preservation of the public health marks a new conception of governmental responsibility. The work thus far marks only the beginning—merely suggests—the good which this department, under the direction of Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, the commissioner, has in view.

In the last thirty years the attitude of the public towards ill health has radically changed. Until the researches of that resourceful genius, Louis Pasteur, disclosed the real cause of contagious diseases, the average man's conception was practically that which had prevailed in the middle ages. The infections were merely manifestations of the inscrutable wisdom of Providence, expressions of divine wrath; punishments for sinful human kind. Even the scientist regarded them as fundamental facts of nature, like death itself, which everyone must uncomplainingly accept. Pasteur, however, in a few masterly experiments, brushed aside all this ignorance and superstition. He showed that all contagious diseases had a clearly defined and obvious origin. They were not mysterious visitations, without tangible cause and insusceptible to tangible control. They were caused by an infinitely large universe of infinitely small forms of vegetable and animal life. He demonstrated that the connection between these malevolent micro-organisms and the ensuing disease was as close as that between sunlight and heat. And he also immediately drew the inevitable conclusion. If the world were once rid of these organisms, he declared, it would be rid of contagious diseases. "It is now within the power of the world"—such was the deduction which he drew from his experiments "to rid itself of all contagious diseases."

Setting Pace in Health Work.

This was the goal at which Pasteur aimed; that has been the goal at which all movements for improving the people's health have necessarily aimed since. And this was the ultimate ambition which led, five years ago, to the organization of the Pennsylvania State Department of Health, a Pennsylvania in which there shall be no young men and women languishing away with tuberculosis; a Pennsylvania in which no children shall die of diphtheria; a Pennsylvania in which there shall be no typhoid, no scarlet fever, no smallpox, no meningitis, no dysentery, no malaria—this is the kind of Pennsylvania which the State Department of Health hopes ultimately to create. It does not expect to reach this goal in a year, or ten years, perhaps not in a single generation, but this is the ideal that it has constantly in mind. It recognizes the fact that, so long as any of these diseases exist, their prevalence is a distinct reproach to the state. It is a reproach simply because the method eliminating them is known. The old theory of government as a power which protects its citizens only from foreign foes and native marauders is giving way to new standards of civilization. The greatest enemies to the state are those which are unseen, and the first duty of an enlightened commonwealth is to protect its people against them. Other states are gradually rising to this new conception, but Pennsylvania now nearly heads them all, for in no other state is the battle against the common enemy being waged on so large a scale as here. The experiment, therefore, is not only of extreme importance to Pennsylvanians, but as an example to the nation and the world.

Does It Pay.

Naturally the people are interested to learn precisely how the large sums the state is investing annually in good health is being spent; what are its dividends, as measured in the actual saving of human lives? Is Pennsylvania a richer, a more healthy commonwealth now than it was four years ago? Is the average citizen less likely to acquire a mortal disease—less likely to die if he does acquire one?

In exchange for its generous appropriations Pennsylvania has received, first of all, a considerable reduction in its death rate. Not so many people die here now as died in 1906, the year when the new department began its organized work. The citizens of Pennsylvania, especially its little children, stand a better chance than they formerly did of reaching mature life and a green old age. Mortality statistics do not commonly furnish exciting reading, but, when considered from this point of view, they make an emphatic personal appeal. Thus, in 1906 and 1907, the death rate in Pennsylvania per thousand of population was 16.5; in 1908, it had dropped to 15.7, and in 1909 to 15.3. At first glance this may not seem a remarkable diminution, but in a state with a population of more than 7,000,000 even a fractional decrease is a substantial gain. This appears when one figures precisely what this slight numerical drop means in the actual saving of human lives. Had the death rate of 1906 and 1907 prevailed in 1908, precisely 5519 more people would have died than actually succumbed. Had this same rate applied in 1909, instead of the decreased percentage recorded by the Bureau of Health, just 8388 men, women and children now living and presumably in good health and spirits, would have rendered their final tribute to nature. In other words these matter of fact statistics, when interpreted in their real relation to the welfare and happiness of the state, mean the saving to the state of 13,907 lives.

Human Lives as State Assets.

This fact has an immense personal meaning for all people of the state—among these rescued lives might have been your own, your wife's, your child's; but they also have a value which is measurable in dollars and cents. The political economists now recognize that the most valuable kind of wealth is the human life—that human labor is worth at least five times that of all other forms of capital. Even the newly landed immigrant, according to these investigators, has a per capita value of $875; that is, he adds just that much to the nation's capital. Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, one of the foremost American economists, has painstakingly figured the financial value to the state of every citizen at particular ages. A new-born infant, says Professor Fisher, is actually worth $90, while a five-year-old child is worth $950. From this point on his value rapidly increases; at ten, could he be sold at auction, his market value would be at least $2000; at twenty it would be $4000, and at thirty, $4100. From this point the average human being begins to lose value, in proportion to his decreasing productivity, until at fifty, Professor Fisher gives him a value of only $700. This same authority places the worth of the average life lost by preventable diseases at $1700. Taking this as a basis the decreased death rate in Pennsylvania for the last two years represents a money saving of $22,641,900. The state, in other words, is just that much richer—has just that much more available capital. For its actual expenditure to date of $3,000,000, including a large portion for permanent improvements, it has taken in more than $23,000,000. The earnings of the new Department of Health, considered purely from the commercial standpoint, thus represent dividends of more than 766 per cent in four years.

What is the value placed by the average citizen upon his children's lives—not the financial value estimated by the unemotional economist, but the worth in affection, good citizenship and in all that holds the social organization together? Is it good business policy to save the lives of children at $7 apiece? Is it paternalistic and socialistic to protect them against dangerous infections at the rate of $2 per head? That is what the state of Pennsylvania is doing now. This conservative old commonwealth has reached that stage of paternalism where the government will not sit quietly by and watch a little child choke to death with diphtheria when the expenditure of a few dollars from the public treasury will relieve its sufferings and save its life.

Saving the Little Ones.

For the last ten years the practical remedy for diphtheria has been available for the children of prosperous households, but it has not been available for the poor. Since Von Behring's immortal discovery that the blood serum of a horse which has recovered from diphtheria possessed wonderful curative properties, and when introduced into the human organism, would usually destroy the disease, this former scourge of childhood has lost nearly all its terrors. In the old days diphtheria destroyed nearly one-half of all the children it assailed. It would do the same today among the poor in Pennsylvania were it not for the antitoxin which the state provides free.

That large numbers of unprotected children have died most shocking deaths in the past for the sole reason that their parents were too poor to afford them anti-toxin, is a melancholy reflection, but these things will not happen in the future. In every corner of Pennsylvania, usually at well known drug stores, there are now stations for the free distribution of anti-toxin, numbering 650. Whenever any poor man's child falls ill with diphtheria, his physician, by making out a proper application, can secure free all the anti-toxin he needs to effect a cure.

Since October, 1905, the Health Department has in this way distributed 49,443 packages of anti-toxin. It has treated 19,929 sick people, mostly children, who, but for the state's intervention, would have been neglected. In the old days about 10,000 of these children would have died; as a matter of fact, only 1725 died. Nearly all those who died were children who did not receive the anti-toxin until the late stages of the disease. The detailed statistics of the department show that the earlier the sick child receives the anti-toxin, the greater his chances of recovery. These facts should emphasize the pressing need, in all cases, not only of anti-toxin treatment, but of this treatment at the earliest possible time. The department has also thoroughly tested the powers of anti-toxin as an immunizing agent. Diphtheria, as every one knows, is one of the most virulently contagious diseases. It travels like lightning from the sick to the well. In the crowded homes of the poor, many of them ideal culture tubes for the growth of the microbes, its virulence is especially marked. The department in three years has immunized with anti-toxin 14,527 persons, nearly all children, who had been exposed to the disease. Of these only 251 acquired it—a little more than one per cent. The State Department of Health's free distribution of antitoxin to the poor, therefore, has saved over 8000 lives at an average cost of seven dollars each and prevented contagion in several thousands of cases at on average cost of two dollars.

Battle Against Tuberculosis.

In its attitude towards the great problem of tuberculosis, the state government also shows this keen sense of responsibility for the safety of the people. The department of health regards all the tuberculosis poor as in a large sense the wards of the state. Its efforts, in the first place, are to prevent them from falling victims to this insidious disease, and in the second, to assist materially in curing those who have become infected.

The death rate from tuberculosis in this state has fallen from 134 to 120 per one thousand of population in four years. This means a saving of 1000 lives annually.

In the matter of tuberculosis, however, the death rate tells only a small part of the story. Any work in improving conditions must be fundamental, and it will necessarily take many years before extensive results are obtained. What the department has done has been to lay the foundation of comprehensive attack. From its laboratory investigations of the tubercle bacillus to its especially equipped sanatoria, there is no aspect of the disease that it does not study and combat. It aims to enter at every stage into the life of the tuberculous poor. To many citizens the state government is more or less of an indefinite idea; they seldom come into contact with it as a living, acting entity; if you are once stricken with tuberculosis, however, especially if you are poor, the commonwealth of Pennsylvania becomes physically manifest in your daily lives. In the medical inspection, in the physician and in the nurses the state ceases to be an economic abstraction and becomes a kind, helping, fostering personality.

The Dispensaries.

If you are stricken down and cannot afford proper medical attendance, there is always near at hand a free tuberculosis dispensary, established for precisely cases of this kind. There are many thousands of patients in the state who are still able to be about and to follow the daily routine, perhaps even to support their families. The 114 tuberculosis dispensaries are of especial assistance to this class. The dispensary physicians have treated 21,227 patients and actually cured 712, while the condition of 2649 has so greatly improved that the arrest of the disease is almost assured. Here the sick man or woman is received by a professional nurse, who makes a complete first-hand investigation of the case. By questioning the patient she learns all the details of his family history, his occupation, his financial resources, his surroundings, at home or at work—the latter particularly for the purpose of protecting his intimates and associates from infection. This information she records for the use of the physician, and the department. She follows up this preliminary talk by an inspection at the patient's home. Here her administrations amount to a liberal education in the treatment of tuberculosis. She instructs the patient as to the proper handling of himself—how he must dress, how he must eat and sleep, and tells him of the well known ways of building up the natural resistance of his body. She also advises all the other members of the household how to escape infection—frequently discovers some members in the early stages of the disease and is thus able to ward it off. The nurse devotes particular attention to diet—nutrition being generally recognized as one of the predominating factors in strengthening the body's defenses. She tells the housewife what to cook and how to cook it. She inquires particularly whether there is a sufficient supply of fresh eggs and milk. Perhaps the family is too poor to supply the sick man with these necessities. In that event the state itself provides them. The dispensary nurses have made 133,444 visits of the kind described above.

Life at Mont Alto.

This, however, is only one department of this life-saving work. Any one who wishes a graphic idea of the state's sanatorium work should visit the tuberculosis colony at Mont Alto. Here, at an elevation of 1600 feet above the sea, amid the breeze swept mountain pines, he will find nearly 800 men, women and children, under the care of physicians and nurses, bravely seeking to combat the disease in the fresh air and sunshine. Laboratory investigations have many times proved that the tubercle bacillus, once exposed to the light and air, shrivels up like a guilty thing and perishes; and the state, in this unique sanatorium, is giving its tuberculous poor their one great chance of overcoming the disease. This Mont Alto site is situated in the midst of a state forest reservation of 5500 acres. It is high, cool, dry, with an abundance of fresh spring water, tillable soil upon which many of the household supplies can be raised, and all the attractions of nature to make pleasant and peaceful the lives of the patients. There is a village of specially constructed cottages in which the incipient cases live, and a large, well equipped hospital building for the advanced cases. At this sanatorium Pennsylvania has treated up to Dec. 31, 1909, 2365 patients, a large number of whom have been permanently cured and a still larger number so effectually strengthened that they are in far better condition than formerly to fight the disease.

Ground is now being cleared for a second state sanatorium on the beautiful site at Cresson, which Mr. Carnegie has so generously given to the commonwealth, and a third site has been selected in the foot hills of the Blue mountains, near Hamburg, in the eastern end of the state.

For Pure Water.

In fighting such a widely prevalent disease as typhoid fever, the usefulness of a central state health organization is especially demonstrated. Against typhoid a local board is practically helpless. This is because the chief source of infection are the water courses. Our rivers unfortunately do not recognize state or county lines. A municipality may prevent water pollution from the banks within its own jurisdiction, but cannot prevent it in other sections. Pittsburg may stop its own citizens from sewering into the streams, but she cannot stop other communities from polluting the waters from which she draws her own supply. And the discouraging fact is that, while one town may refrain from polluting the stream so that another further down may not have to drink its filth, its own water supply may be polluted by less conscientious neighbors living up-stream. Up to the year 1905 man in Pennsylvania appeared to have lost the natural instincts of the lower animals and seemed indifferent to the danger of loading his system with that which nature has once thrown off as poison. Man, unlike the beasts of the field, had taken on the habit of discharging his offal into the streams from which he took his drinking water. Only some central body, which has absolute control over all water courses, can accomplish a general purification of the streams.

The legislature recognized this necessity for central control when, in 1905, it placed all water courses, so far as public sanitation was concerned, under the jurisdiction of the governor, attorney general and commissioner of health. But there are also other private sources of pollution—especially the old-fashioned privies and wells which still are found in large numbers, overflowing into streams. These the department of health has now the power to abolish. The department has in file complete and detailed maps showing all the state's water courses, large and small. Whenever a case of typhoid fever is reported it can immediately put its finger on the watershed where the disease originated and investigate accordingly. No municipality can now construct water works without first obtaining the state's approval of its plans. It cannot build sewerage plants without similar consent. Acting through these broad powers, the health department, through its army of inspectors, has penetrated the remotest recesses of the state, inspecting premises, noting palpable nuisances, investigating water and sewerage systems. A wholesome clean-up has ensued. In most cases the individuals and municipalities affected have realized the necessity of remedial measures and have accepted the work in a proper spirit. Up to date it has inspected 256,628 premises in rural districts and caused the abatement of 18,945 pollutions. It has issued 204 decrees requiring changes in public water works. Under its advice and suggestion, all over the state, cities and municipal bodies have awakened and voluntarily begun to improve their water supplies. Under the supervision of the department sixty-seven sewage disposal plants and thirty-five water filter plants have been built or are now under construction.

Typhoid Cut Down.

The purification of the state's drinking water is a large task and will take many years, but already the improvements have cut the typhoid death rate in half. In 1906, 56.5 out of every 100,000 people died from this disease; in 1907, 50.3; in 1908, 34.4, and in 1909, 23.9. That is there are now living 2363 people who, had the death rate of 1906 prevailed in 1909, would have died.

I believe enough has been said to convince you that Pennsylvania's citizens have been made richer in health, happiness and industrial vigor and the state rendered more attractive, both for residential and manufacturing purposes and for the mere joy of life, by the application of the grand health laws of 1905.

You cannot capitalize human tears and mental anguish.

You cannot estimate in dollars the world's loss through the pessimism engendered by premature death, disease or the despair of poverty, which may follow both.

You cannot compute even the principal of the debt laid upon individuals, communities or states by the moral delinquencies that result absolutely from physical suffering alone.

But we can rejoice when we know beyond all doubt that in every year untimely death has been shut out of more than 8000 of our homes and that at least 50,000 of our people are annually spared the ravages of acute diseases.

And with a pride blended with thankfulness we can rejoice in the spirit of Pennsylvania's fostering care for her people which made these results possible.

Foreign Geography.

Children of European birth who were old enough to receive some instruction in geography before coming to this country hold opinions in regard to the political divisions of the earth which all the American geographers and the teachers thereof combined cannot upset. A New York teacher found that out when she tried to impress upon a young Austrian miss that Columbus is the capital of Ohio.

"It is Cincinnati, on the Ohio," retorted the Austrian maiden politely, but firmly.

Maps and printed text were produced to prove her error. The pupil was in nowise convinced.

"It wasn't that way in our geography at home," said she. And the next day, to uphold her contention, she brought the geography on which she based her assertion. That book was not a perfect product of the geography maker's art, for it certainly did state that Cincinnati, on the Ohio river, was the capital of Ohio.

"But that is a mistake," said the teacher. Then day after day, when the girl was called upon to recite, the teacher put the question of discord. "What is the capital of Ohio?" and day after day, at the risk of bad marks, came the positive reply, "Cincinnati, on the Ohio."—New York Press.

Whelks' Eggs.

Natural soap is not heard of very often, but it not only exists, but is highly prized by Jack Tar in the tropics when the purser reports that the ship's supply of soap has given out. Then all hands are sent ashore to gather a supply of "natural soap," which is found on the shore in the shape of whelks' eggs. The whelk is a little shellfish, or marine mollusk, which in Europe is eaten like mussels, cockles, oysters and clams, but in the tropics it is more highly esteemed for the soap it provides in the shape of its eggs. The eggs are found in a light yellowish mass which is composed of some five or six hundred capsules. One fish alone produces millions of these eggs in the course of the year. They are found on the shores of the Atlantic, but are very profuse on the intertropical coral reefs, where sailors take large quantities aboard for use as soap.

Why Suffer?

If you suffer pain from any cause, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve it—and leave no bad after-effects. That's the important thing. Neither do they create a habit. More often the attacks become less frequent, or disappear altogether. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no other effect except to relieve pain and quiet nervous irritation.

"We are never without Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. My husband and son, aged 15 were always subject to sick headache until we began using these Pills, and they have broken them up entirely. Don't think they have had to use them for six months. I recommend them to every one. A few weeks ago I heard an old lady friend was sick. I went to see her. She was down with LaGrippe, and nearly crazy with awful backache. I gave her one of the Anti-Pain Pills and left another for her to take in a short time. They helped her right away, and she says she will never be without them again. Last winter my husband was taken with pluerisy on both sides, and I know he would have died if it hadn't been for the Pills. In less than half an hour he was sweating, and went to bed and slept."

AFRICA'S SERVANT PROBLEM

Are All Men, and They Delight in Grease, Rags and Dirt.

Servants are an absolute necessity in Africa, declares a woman writer in The Delineator for April. But next to the climate and the insects, the native servants are the greatest pests. Even the best of them are the worst imaginable. They delight in grease, rags and dirt. They never do anything if they can avoid it.

Servants are all of the male gender. They are engaged by the month and paid in cash or merchandise, at their option. The principal servants are: cook, houseboy, small-boy, jack-wash and headman.

I was very fortunate in getting one. His wages were $5 a month, cash, and all he could steal. He dressed in an undershirt and the cast-off trousers of some white man. At the end of the month, when he received his wages, most of it went for rum and anisette bought at the factory. When the money was gone he tapped a palm-tree and drank of its fermented juice. No matter how intoxicated he became his meals were always on time and he was polite and deferential. He called me Missy.

Because we both spoke English and he was a British subject, he looked after me in a way. He instructed the bushmen how to act and dress before a white woman. He warned me when there was any mischief brewing, and when he got into trouble, which was very frequently, he looked to me for aid. But he never forgot his position. He was small, slight, 33 years of age, could read and write, and sing Moody and Sankey hymns. He came into my employ the day I landed in the bush and left me only when I took the steamer at the coast to return to civilization. On the march, he was the first to start away with the cooking kit on his head; upon my arrival in camp, he met me with hot coffee. No matter how discouraging the conditions, he was faithful. Had I raked all Africa I could not have found a more faithful servant. Only those who have lived in the bush can appreciate such a one. If native cooks do not like their master, they have a habit of feeding him slow poison. Many a white man makes his cook first partake of the food

WOMEN AND THE MENUS

Odd Reluctance on Part of Fair Sex to Choose Dishes in Restaurants.

A particularly observant reader, who confesses that he is a bachelor, raises an interesting question.

"Have you noticed, he writes, "that no woman can choose a meal from a menu, or at least, that she never does?

"Go into the restaurant or grill room of any of the leading hotels and watch. A woman will pick up the menu, toy with it for a moment or two, and then place it in front of her without even a pretense of reading it. The actual task of ordering her lunch or dinner she leaves to whoever is with her. Why is that?"

At first there appeared to be more humor than seriousness in the question says the London Mirror, but inquiries made confirmed the accuracy of our correspondent's observations.

"I will let you into the secret," said a headwaiter. "Women look at the menus not to choose dishes, but to note prices. Women customers here are cultured, shrewd and businesslike and whether they have much or little money they are careful to know the exact amount they are spending."

M. Angelo Ventura, the superintendent of the Carlton Hotel grill room, said that nine out of ten lady customers liked to rely on the advice of the waiters.

"A woman," he said, "does not care to take the trouble of looking through a menu item by item. She prefers to ask us what we have and we very carefully explain the dishes and advise her.

"This is matinee day, and, as usual on matinee days, several parties of three or four ladies lunched here before going to the theater. Many of them were regular customers who leave the ordering of the lunch to us and the majority had a light, inexpensive meal, with a glass of white wine or mineral water."

The manager of the Hotel Cecil restaurant made a similar reply.

"The fact that menus are printed in French," he said, "does not create any difficulty, as most of our lady customers, both English and Americans, have a knowledge of French.

"Instead of making a long study of the menu, the women prefer to ask us what we have and usually accept our advice."

Several men also said that every woman with whom they had lunched or dined at a restaurant refused to take any part in the selection of the meal.

One married man suggested as the reason for this that women ordered the meals in their own homes and consequently much preferred not to do so whenever they could escape what they had grown to look upon as a domestic duty.

An American Heiress Imposes Upon Her Titled Suitor.

By SARAH J. ATWATER

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The center of art in Europe is Florence. The town is always full of Americans, and there are usually American art students there. One day an American girl, in rich apparel, while gazing at the paintings hung in the Pitti palace in that artistic city stopped at the easel of a copyist—a girl about her own age—who was copying a Titian, admired her work and entered into conversation with her. The artist was a Miss May Monroe of St. Louis, the other Miss Margaret De Forest of New York. The acquaintance thus begun was continued, and in time Miss De Forest engaged Miss Monroe to paint her portrait.

"I am going to take you into my confidence," said Miss De Forest to Miss Monroe one day while sitting for the picture, "and ask you to do me a favor. I possess an immense fortune and have come abroad for the purpose of meeting a suitor who has never seen me. Mutual friends have made an arrangement by which Count Desmond de l'Amoureux, descended from one of the oldest families in France, is to visit me, and if we are both agreed we are to marry. I am not to be taken in by any adventurer and have investigated the count's position thoroughly. He possesses valuable estates which with my fortune would enable us to take a very prominent position in European society.

"But I will marry no man who does not love me. My wish is that you shall impersonate me to the count, I impersonating you, a protegee of my real self. If I like him I will endeavor to win him away from you. In that way I shall know that he loves me for myself."

"That would make a very pretty romance," said Miss Monroe.

"Unless you fall in love with him yourself."

"No fear of that. I'm engaged to be married."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; to a young American, a struggling artist like myself."

"That is fortunate. We can take him into the secret and, forming a party of four, go about together, thus enabling me to carry out my plan."

"And enjoy ourselves as well."

Count Desmond de l'Amoureux arrived and was introduced to the two girls, they occupying reversed positions. Bernard Wright was introduced to the count as the fiance of the real Margaret De Forest. The four visited together the galleries, the mediaeval buildings and the environs of Florence, enjoying every moment. The party filled a carriage, and many were the drives they took over the beautiful hills and dales about the city in the delicious Florentine sunshine.

Young Wright, devoted to his art and, with the usual artistic temperament, careless as to material possessions, entered upon his part of the deception reluctantly and merely to please Miss Monroe. He paid his devoirs perfunctorily to the heiress, but was by no means bored at doing so. His real mistress was his brush. Miss Monroe seemed to enjoy immensely personating an heiress and was very patronizing to the real Miss De Forest. Count de l'Amoureux was evidently from the first very much pleased with the girl whom he supposed to be Miss De Forest, and Miss Monroe knew with a woman's quick intuition that it was not interest alone that moved him.

Miss De Forest soon began to practice artful means to draw the nobleman away from her substitute. Margaret was an attractive girl and knew how to win a man. Nevertheless the count was constant to May. One day while sitting with her on the Piazza Michelangelo, a hill overlooking the city and the Arno flowing through its quayed banks and under its old fashioned bridges, he said:

"Where did you pick up your protegee?"

"I met her here in Florence. She's a lovely girl."

"H'm! I don't fancy her."

Miss Monroe laughed.

"Why are you merry?" asked the count.

"I was thinking, supposing I were to turn over my fortune to her, how long would it be before you would transfer your attentions from me to her."

"I will grant that there was a time when I might have done this, when we first met, though I fancied you in preference immediately. But now that I have known you a transfer would be impossible."

"Suppose you try."

"Try! What do you mean?"

"I think May cares for you. Before entering upon any contract to become your wife I should prefer that you remain for a time under her influence. She and I are bosom friends and shall always be much together. I don't care to have an affair between my husband and my friend. I prefer to trust his constancy before marriage."

"But you must have seen that Miss Monroe has not been averse to my attentions and that I have not given them."

"Devote yourself to her for two weeks."

"It would seem an age."

Miss Monroe flatly refused to excuse her suitor from the test, and he finally consented, the period being reduced from two weeks to two days. He attempted to make a beginning the next afternoon when the four were walking together in the Pitti gardens. He joined Miss De Forest.

She turned away from him.

Now, it is not pleasing to the amour propre of a nobleman who has descended from one of the proudest houses in France to be snubbed by an American girl of ordinary lineage, and a protegee at that. The count was furious. He regretted that he had not accepted the two weeks' period of trial offered, since it would give him time to teach this young woman whom he did not like that she could not with impunity turn away an attention from the Count de l'Amoureux. He found himself in an equivocal position. Miss Monroe had not seen the snub he had received, and he was too proud to confess it to her. And yet for two days he was expected to devote himself to the girl who would not accept his attentions. What was to be done? He begged Miss Monroe to let him off from the balance of his trial on the ground that it was obnoxious to him. She refused. He passed a weary time till the period had passed nursing his wrath. Then the lady who had snubbed him relented.

The temptation to give her a bit of punishment was too great for the count to resist. A little side play from this time went on all the while which Miss Monroe was not supposed to notice. The count was really making love to Miss De Forest with a view to tossing her away when he should have won in the game. It was not long before he discovered that the protegee was a girl of superior judgment and endowments to the one whom he believed it was to his interest to marry. About the time he had made up his mind to this Miss De Forest began to court the attention of Bernard Wright. Young Wright did not appear to be especially desirous to give it, but this did not make any difference to the count. He saw that the girl preferred another to himself. The pique he felt he attributed to the danger of losing his revenge.

The spring was fading into summer, and yet the count was not engaged. Indeed, he was beginning to think that he would go back to France to remain, for a time at least, a bachelor. The lady to whom he was devoting himself openly had intimated her willingness to accept him, but he did not propose. The lady whom he was endeavoring to punish was punishing him. There were times when he was tempted to commit the folly of throwing himself, his position and his name away on her—that is, if she would accept him, a matter of which he could not form any opinion.

One evening he was standing on that old bridge, the Ponte Vecchio, looking over the Arno to the westward. The sun had set, but the day lingered. The placid river reflected the houses and the quays, bordered by a long chain of lights on either side. The old stone bridges were reflected, too, the reflection of one appearing under the one next beyond, the stone and the image together forming a circle. The nobleman was thinking of the American protegee. Suddenly a soft voice behind him called:

"Count!"

He turned and saw Margaret.

"Where did you come from?" he asked.

"Visiting the palace of the king. I am on my way to the hotel. Isn't it a lovely sight?"

"Ravishing."

"And to think that I must leave it! I go tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!"

"Yes; I am called home to America."

"Then if I must part from you this is a fit scene to remember as the last we saw together in this unique city."

She rested her arms on the stone coping, and they looked at the beautiful sight together. Presently he said:

"I, too, go tomorrow."

"Ah!"

"Yes; I return to France."

"Engaged?"

"No; I came with a view to enhance my position by a favorable marriage. I have given that up."

"Why?"

"Because I have been turned from my purpose."

Wright and Miss Monroe came up as he spoke the last words. The four enjoyed the view for awhile, then walked on together.

The next morning the count left Florence by an early train and Miss De Forest by a later one.

The count went to Paris, where at a hotel overlooking the garden of the Tuileries he strove to turn from his mind the girl with whom he had parted on the Ponte Vecchio in Florence. Hoping for better success at his home, he was about to take a train when he received a card on one side of which was the name "Margaret De Forest" and on the other: "I am about to start for America. Should be pleased to see you once more before I go. Call this evening."

L'Amoureux hesitated whether to excuse himself or to accept. A desire to see one connected with May Monroe in so many pleasant rambles conquered, and he determined to accept.

The lady who entered the reception room surprised him.

"Why," he said, "I received Miss De Forest's card."

"I sent you Miss De Forest's card."

"Why so?"

"Because I am Miss De Forest."

The count stood stupefied.

She told him the story of the deception. A Frenchman, he could not understand the ways of a Yankee woman, but his delight at the denouement of the little comedy in which he had played the fool was unbounded.

"And now," he said, "we will begin what we meant to begin in Florence."

24,000 MILES OF TRACK

Greatest in History of Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Cincident with the announcement that the number of Pennsylvania Railrod stockholders had passed the 60,000 mrk, the Company has issued its annual "Record of Transportation Lines," showing that on December 31st, 1909, it had 24,097.94 miles of track--the greatest in the history of the Company.

The Pennsylvania Railroad System has 11,234.36 miles of line, of which 6294.32 miles are east of Pittsburgh and Erie, and the remainder, 4,940.04, run west of Pittsburgh. These lines run through fourteen states in which live more than one-half of the 90,000,000 people in this country.

The System now has 760.10 miles of first track, 3,348.39 miles of second tract, 760.10 miles of third track, and 574.20 miles of fourth track. It also has 8,184.89 miles of siding. The increase in the trackage in the year 1909 was 120.53 miles.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is essentiallyan institution of the State of Pennsylvania for in it are located 4,101.03 of the 11,284.36 miles of line. Ohio is second in Pennsylvania mileage, having a total of 1,835.99. In Indiana the System has 1540.46 miles of line, while the remainder is divided as follows: Delaware, 275.36; District of Columbia, 12.98; Illinois, 642 44; Kentucky, 2.31; Maryland, 605.52; Michigan, 441.20; Missouri, 30.78; New Jersey, 772.26; New York, 813.21; Virginia, 71.74; West Virginia, 89.08.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my housework alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of earache and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

"I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work."

WEDDED AT MILESBURG

Miss Alice Robinson Becomes Bride of Dr. Hurley, of New Jersey.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at high noon, on Monday, in the Presbyterian church at Milesburg, the contracting parties being Miss Alice Robinson, daughter of H. C. Robinson, of Milesburg, and Dr. H. Larson Hurley, of Williamstown, N. J. The simple ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Schuyler, of Centre Hall, who was formerly the family minister. The church was beautifully decorated and as the wedding march was impressively rendered by Miss Alma Stine, of Zion, the bridal procession slowly marched down the centre aisle of the church.

The bride was dressed in a rich white tulle costume and was given to be married by her father. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hurley were tendered a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride and groom departed on the noon train for an extended wedding tour of eastern cities, after which they will make their home in Williamstown, where Dr. Hurley has an extensive practice.

Among those who attended the wedding were: Misses Blanche and Mame McGarvey and Grace Blackford, of Bellefonte; Miss Roxanna Brisbin, of Center Hall; Miss Mable Allison, of Spring Mills; Mr. and Mrs. John I. Robison and Mrs. H. Butts, of State College, and Andrew J. McNitt, of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Hurley are a charming young couple and "The Republican" joins their many friends in wishing them "bon voyage" through all of life's journey.

MUSSER—SUNDAY.

On Tuesday evening last, Paul F. Musser and Miss Laura Sunday gave their friends a real surprise by appearing before Rev. J. E. Bierly, at the Methodist Episcopal church parsonage, at Pine Grove Mills. They were quickly united in the holy bonds of wedlock. On arriving at the Sunday home an elaborate wedding supper was served. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sunday and is a splendid young lady. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Musser, on the Branch, and is a hustling young farmer, a young man who is industrious and energetic and in every way qualified to become the head of a home. The many friends of the young couple extend hearty congratulations and best wishes.

SCHENCK—SMITH

Irvin Schenck, son of Albert Schenck, of Liberty township, and Miss Olive Smith, daughter of John W. Smith, of Shirleysburg, were united in marriage at the home of William B. Pletcher, in the township, last Thursday by Rev. Rollin R. Taylor. After a short trip they returned to Howard and are making their home with Mr. Pletcher. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Pletcher lived on adjoining farms, one in Liberty and one in Howard township. Both are very popular "down the creek" and their many friends join in congratulations and wish them a prosperous journey through life. The groom will be employed on his father's farm.

SMITH-MEESE.

Fred Arthur Smith, son of Mrs. A. H. Smith, of Philipsburg, and Miss Florence Rebe Meese, of Tyrone, were united in marriage on last Sunday evening at Bellwood. The whole affair was kept a secret from their most intimate friends and not until several days after did the happy event become known. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Meese, formerly of Bellefonte but now of Tyrone. The groom is one of the most popular and efficient brakeman on the Tyrone and Clearfield division. The young couple will reside in Tyrone.

JACKSON—GEARHART.

Howard K. Jackson, formerly of Osceola, and now of Philipsburg, and Miss Helen E. Gearhart, daughter of Mrs. Andrew Gearhart, of Chester Hill, were married on last Thursday at the Lutheran parsonage in Clearfield. They returned to Philipsburg the same night and will make their home their for the present.

"This Woman and That Man."

"This Woman and That Man" the most finished and meritorious work from the pen of Avery Hopwood, the author of the latest and and best comedy of recent years "Seven Days" will be the attaction at Garman's Opera House on Monday evening, April 4. The company which is of the very best players, is headedby the well known versatile comedy and emotional actress, Miss Minnie Victo son, have won unstinted praise from pres and public wherever they appeared, the Maxine Theatre, New York with unusual praise from the leading critics. The New York American on February 23, said: "The audience gave the production a flattering reception. This was especially true of the women who wept at the pathetic scenes and laughed uproariously at the humor."

Centre County Deaths.

she continued to live until her death. She leaves to mourn her death the following children: Mrs. Mary Shields and Mrs. Harry Jackson, of Bellefonte; Mrs. Klausins, of Altoona; and Michael Hazel, of Benner township. Mrs. Hazel was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic church, from which place the funeral was held on Monday morning.

HENRY FISHEL.

The venerable Henry Fishel, a very highly respected citizen of College township, died at his late home last Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, of heart trouble and other ailments. He had been ill most of the Winter, so that his death was not unexpected although it occasioned the greatest sorrow among his many friends. Deceased was aged 74 years and was a miller by trade. He milled at McFarlane, Centre Furnace and Pine Grove Mills. He was a member ofCo. E, 93rd Reg. Penna. Volunteers, and served his country well. He was severely wounded and was discharged, November 10, 1862, for disability. He was married on Christmas and buried on Easter. His wife was Miss Ella Dewey, and to this union the following children were born: Thomas, John, Mrs. William Houts, Mrs. Bert Ralston, all of Lemont, and Irvin Fishel, of Indiana county. Burial was made on Sunday at Houserville, the services being conducted by Rev. A. A. Black, of the Reformed church, of which the deceased was a member. He was also a member of Captain Foster Post. G. A. R., and his comrades in arms served the last rites that laid him away, assisted by a squad of Beaver Camp, No. 90.

MAJOR ROWLAND C. CHEESMAN.

Major Rowland C. Cheesman, at one time a well known resident of Bellefonte and an active figure in Grand Army circles, died on Friday night, of last week, at his late residence at Washington, D. C. Major Cheesman was born at Curtin, this county. In recent years he made his home at Washiugton, where he was a member of the Board of Review of the Pension Office. He was president of the Forty-fifth Regiment, Penna. Volunteers Association, and was chosen to that honor at the convention held a few weeks ago at Williamsport. During the Civil war Major Cheesman enlisted in Company A, 45th Regiment; was promoted to First Sergeant, September 25, 1862; to Second Lieutenant, March 18, 1863; to Company F, September 29, 1864; was wounded at Blue Springs, Kentucky, and at Petersburg, Va., June 18, 1894; wounded and made a prisoner, September 30, 1864; transferred from Company F, March 24, 1865; wounded with loss of right leg at Petersburg, April 2, 1865; brevet Major, April 2, 1865; mustered out July 16, 1865. Among those surviving is a sister, Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Milesburg.

EDWARD POORMAN.

A death which has cast sorrow among a wide circle of friends was that of Edward Poorman, at Runville, on Monday, last. Mr. Poorman was postmaster and a well known merchant at Runville and was held in the highest regard by all with whom he was acquainted. He was engaged in business for upward of twenty years, and during the last ten years he served as postmaster. He was a man of sterling integrity and his death is a distinct loss to that community. Surviving are a widow, one son, five daughters, three brothers and four sisters.

RALPH HOCKENBERRY.

Ralph Hockenberry, son of Mrs. Alice Hockenberry, of Quaker Hill, died on Friday Morning, last, about 3 o'clock after an illness of one week with pneumonia. The deceased was 17 years old and is survived by his mother and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Andrew Thal, Katherine, Sarah, Ruth, Margaret, Minnie, William, Joseph and Edward, all of Bellefonte. The funeral was held Monday afternoon services being conducted in the Evangelical church by Rev. J. F. Hower.

KELLIGHER KINKEAD.

Allan Kinkead, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Kinkead, of North Philipsburg, and Miss Catherine Kelligher, of Philipsburg, were married at Jersey Shore on Monday, last, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Mr. Kautz, pastor of the Grace Lutheran church, of that place. The groom is a well known young fireman on the New York Central. Mr. and Mrs. Kinkead will make their home at Jersey Shore.

EDITH LYTLE.

Miss Edith Lytle died on March 9, at the home of D. C. Harpster, at Stormstown after an extended illness. She had been in poor health for some time. She spent several months at White Haven and finally returned to the Harpster home. Deceased was 27 years old and was an estimable young woman. She had many friends among whom the announcement of her death caused the deepest sorrow.

AUSTIN SHOPE.

Austin Shope, of Snow Shoe, died yesterday at the Bellefonte hospital, aged 55 years. He was admitted to the hospital on Friday, last, in a critical condition with catarrhal pneumonia.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR CONGRESS.

I desire to announce myself as a candidate for Congress, subject to the action of the primaries of the Republican party, in the Twenty-first Congressional District of Pennsylvania.

C. F. BARCLAY.

FOR CONGRESS.

You are authorized to announce my name as a candidate for Congress, from the 21 Congressional District composed of the Counties of Clearfield, McKean, Centre and Cameron, subject to the Rules of the Republican Party. Primary Election, June 4, 1909.

Yours truly,
CHAS. E. PATTON
Curwensville,
Clearfield County.

FOR CONGRESS.

To The Editor: I hereby announce myself a candidate for Congress in the 21st Pennsylvania district, subject to the decision of the Republican voters at the primaries to be held June 4 1910. I make this announcement and enter the contest in compliance with the earnest requests of many prominent members of the party in the district and also because I believe that in Congress, if elected, I would be in a position to effectively advocate those principles and measures of good government, which now more than ever, should be embodied in Federal legislation. I believe in clean policies and progressive Roosevelt policies. And to the end that I may serve their best interests, I ask the support of the Republicans of this district.

LEWIS EMERY, JR.
Bradford, Pa., March 15, 1910.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

The undersigned respectfully announces himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the State Senate, in the 34th., Senatorial District, and solicits your support at the Primaries, on Saturday, June, 4th., 1910.

IF the banker were to seek the world over for a representative to take his place in modestly and forcefully speaking of the service, equipment and safety of his institution, he could not find a more faithful, accurate and efficient assistant than the printed message in a reputable newspaper.

We use this medium in addressing those who need the service of a bank—and who does not?—assuring them that, with our experience, our equipment and the security offered by a large surplus and conservative management, we feel confident we can give the best and most efficient service.

Mrs. William Lego made a business trip to Aloona on Saturday.

A. R. Price was a Bellefonte visitor recenty.

J. T. Beckwih transacted business in Tyrone on Monday.

Mrs. Will Fink, of Julian, was the guest of her brother, Thomas, Marks on Thursday, last.

A surprise party that was a pleasing success was tendered Mrs. George M. Walk, at her home on Thursday evening, last. About thirty of her friends dropped in and spent the evening with her in a most delightful manner. Refreshments were served and a most pleasant time was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Walk was the recipient of a number of useful tokens of esteem and when her guests departed they extended wishes for many happy returns of the day.

Woodward.

Mr. and Mrs. Treaster attended a funeral at Lewistown last week.

Harry Kessinger, who had been working at Zion, returned to his family here on Saturday.

Miss Mary Foreman returned on Friday, last, to her home at Spring Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bierly, of Rebersburg, were guests at the D. C. Benner home on Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hosterman and baby, of Spring Mills, visited on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Hosterman's parents.

Roy Hazel and wife were entertained by Miss Bertha Hosterman at the Woodward House on Sunday.

Misses Maude Ard and Mable Wolfe spent Friday very pleasantly at the home of Frank Guisewhite, at Fiedler.

Mrs. Ellen Bowersox on Tuesday attended the funeral of her brother, William Von Neida, at Laurelton.

Miss Maude Ard was a shopping visitor to Coburn on Monday.

SCOTLAND'S FAMOUS GHOSTS

Faith in Phantoms Has Hold on Mind of Practical Sandy.

Faith in ghosts still haunts the minds of many practical Scotsmen, and the instances of the live supernatural upon which it is fed are infinitely preferable to the irrational credulities of our crystal gazers and other romancers of the world of "spooks," says Cassell's Journal. At the seat of the Airlies there is the ghostly drummer, whose rub-a-dub is the invariable presage of death in the family. At Newton Castle still walks of a night the "Green Lady," so called from her green silk dress; and in Berkickshire the residence of Allanbank is haunted by the troubled spirit of "Pearlin Jean." She is so called from her fondness for a particular kind of lace, and rustles up and down stairs in her silks.

The spirit of Lady Hamilton of Bothwellbaugh, who was turned out naked into the open fields, where she went raving mad and her babe died of cold, haunts the site of the ancient mansion of Woodhouselee. Glamis Castle comes inevitably to the mind. Here "Earl Pattie" played, one Sabbath night, his game at the cartes with the evil one in person, and was destined to resume the same infernal accompaniment of shrieks and blasphemies long after he had been laid in his unquiet grave. Here, too, is a hideous secret contained in an inaccessible inner room, the mystery of which is revealed to the heir and factor alone. This evil spirit can find no annihilation, unlike the unhappy thing that was heard crying through the night at Whittingehame, over the border, which, when it was hailed by a witless drunken fellow as "Shorthoggers" a facetious reference to the footless stockings in which it seemed to be clad forthwith and forever vanished from the knowledge of man.

In a well known country house of Fifeshire, which has been for very many generations in the hands of the same family, an unhappy leman by day and night haunts the great stairs. Some time ago a member of the house party, while going down to lunch, stooped to pick up her handkerchief. As she recovered herself she saw a lady, richly dressed and exceedingly handsome, come from a door opening on the landing and hurry down stairs. As neither at table nor in the drawing room did she again meet this stranger, she mentioned the fact to her host, who (inadvertently) turned the topic of conversation. The next day, while going through the ancient mansion with her host and hostess, among other rooms they looked into that out of which the lady had emerged. The walls were lined with family potraits, but one place was unfilled—its picture lay face against the floor. Said the host: "Oh, Miss So-and-So, you have heard of my great-grand-cousin who was rather a disgrace to the family early last century? This is her room." Saying this, he bent down and turned the picture round. "What do you think of her beauty?" There were the very face and figure his guest had seen upon the stairs!

NEW CURE FOR INSOMNIA.

Spot on the Wall and a Psychological Explanation.

Some months ago a friend informed me that he was a great sufferer from sleeplessness. He had experimented with all maner of remedies—baths, drugs, exercise, dieting—but could find not relief, writes H. Addington Bruce, in The Delineator.

"How about the 'spot on the wall' cure?" I asked him.

"I haven't heard of that. What is it?"

"It's very simple." I told him, "yet very efficacious. I presume that some light from the street lamp or the moon usually gets into your bedroom? Well, where it strikes the wall you will be pretty sure to find spots that seem to stand out vividly from the dark background. Select one of these patches of brightness, one preferably not much larger than a silver dollar. Settle down comfortably in such a way that it will be within easy range of your vision without straining to see it. Then gaze at it steadily.

"Do not, however, try to stare it out of countenance, so to speak. Instead, let the muscles of your eyes relax until the spot appears to have a confused outline. At the same time, if possible, think of nothing but the one idea—'I am going to sleep!'

"Before long, your eyes will begin to feel tired, and they will gradually close. Open them, and once more gaze at the spot on the wall. Again they will close. Again open them. Presently you will find it impossible to open them."

"Recently I again met him, and found him full of enthusiasm.

"That was a splendid scheme," said he. "I sleep like a top nowadays, am asleep almost as soon as I touch the pillow? But I can't for the life of me understand why that should have worked when everything else failed."

It "worked" for the reason that I had succeeded in lodging in his mind the idea that it would work. Chronic insomnia such as my friend suffered from, is in many cases nothing more than a habit, and may accurately be described as the result of a frame of mind. It is distinctly psychical rather than a physical malady.

Don't forget that Green's soda fountain is running the year 'round.

Hints to Stock Owners.

The chaff and straw get in the wool and injure it.

Do not let sheep run around or eat from straw stacks.

Sheep that have been chased by dogs never do quite so well afterward. Work hard to keep the dogs out.

There is more profit in a grunting pig than in a squealing one.

In some cases it may be necessary to dissolve some Epsom salts in the feed.

There is a great shortage in the hog crop throughout the whole country, and it can only be replaced by keeping the best brood sows and growing more pigs.

Be sure the sows are not constipated. Give roots, fruits and oil-meat in the feed.

You had better scour the feeding pail than lose a calf from scours.

When you hurry about milking, the cow feels uncomfortable and shortens up on you a little. That hurts you and hurts the cow as well.

Some folks get to be pretty good guessers in determining the temperature of cream, but nobody ever came within gunshot of the theremometer in this respect.

The root cutter is almost an indispensable machine on the farm. The life of many a valuable cow would have been saved if the apples and potatoes fed had been run through a root cutter.

If the feed gets short before the pasture is ready, it is better to buy more.

There is no economy in cutting down the feed at the freshening period.

Grow as much feed as is possible. Get the soiling crops in as early as the land will permit. Do not lose a day.

Sow a good acreage of oats and peas. All that is not eaten green can be harvested as oats-pea hay.

Go slow the first days of plowing; it will make a gain in the end.

During the first days of plowing the collars should be raised often to cool the shoulders.

A sour manger is the abomination of a really good horse. The man who forces a horse to eat from such a vile place is sure to be the loser, and will sometimes lose the horse with intestinal disorders, including colic.

Wheat bran and oats make strong bones in the colt.

When the colt is dropped it should receive nourishment from the dam within the first half hour.

An attendant should be on hand at the time of birth, for a little timely help has saved many a valuable colt.

A lazy man should never breed colts, for he must be alert and on the job if he wishes to succeed.

Start the milk with the thumb and finger if the colt is not very strong, or if the udder is at all hard.

Take the chill off the water for the mare, and feed her carefully and keep her quiet for a number of days.

PENNA. R. R. Y. M. C. A.

Annual Report on Work of Association at Philadelphia.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Department Y. M. C. A. in Philadelphia has just issued its annual report covering the work of the association in 1909. In practically every activity there was increased interest as shown by the total attendance of 344,439 during the year.

The total attendance at religious service and classes was 18,873, while at the entertainments and lectures there were 60,592. Some 320 members were enrolled in the educational classes, of which 606 sessions were held. The library, which embraces over 9,000 volumes, reported 21,319 books issued during the year. The attendance at the social gatherings was 10,260. At the Annex at Broad Street Station, the number using the facilities afforded there was 89,290. At the main building the attendance for the year was 134,967. The gymnasium classes had 9,717, while at the Athletic Field during the Summer there were 18,000 exercising on the grounds, exclusive of many spectators.

In the Junior Department the total attendance for the year was 9,760, an increase of 2,052, over 1908. At the Seashore House at Ocean City the number of visitors during the Summer months was 2,745, while the John Linn Patton cottage at the Dwight Farms at Dowingtown accommodated a very large number.

The total membership of the Pennsylvania Railroad Branch Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia, according to the annual report, is 1,927. This is the largest number ever enrolled and it is indicative of the steady growth of this work.

W. A. Patton, Assistant to the President, is General Chairman of the Pennsylvania Railroad Department Y. M. C. A., while the following officers of the Company are members of the Advisory Committee: N. Paker Shortridge, James McCrea, Wm. A. Patton, M. Riebenack, Charles E. Pugh, W. H. Barnes and Thomas DeWitt Cuyler.

GOOD WORK OF MICROBES

Without Them World Would be Cumbered With Plant and Animal Decay.

Few persons can realize at once what an immense number and variety of microbes there are, not only around us, in the air and dust and water, but also in us and on us and in and on every living thing, says the London Telegraph. The work, the huge system of chemical change and the circulation of the elements, carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and sulphur, which they carry on is incessant, varied and complex. Those five elements are the main and essential constituents of all living things. Supposing there were no microbes, there would be no putrefaction, no breaking down of the dead bodies of animals and plants which were once alive into gas and substances soluble in water.

They, by a series of steps in which different kinds of bacteria or microbes are successively concerned, convert the proteids and the fats and sugars of dead plants and animals into less elaborate bodies, organic acids, aromatic bodies, and other compounds (some highly poisonous to man,) and at last, when what were highly complex combinations of hundreds of atoms in each molecule have been reduced by the action of first one and then of another kind of microbe into comparatively simple substances of 20 or 30 atoms to the molecule, the "coup de grace" is given by certain special microbes, which convert these later compounds into still simpler combinations namely, ammonia and nitrates, which are fairly stable, so that the whole elaborate chemical fabric of living matter in a few hours or days after death is broken down until it reaches the stable "mineral" condition, practically carbonate and nitrate of ammonia—smelling salts!

If there were no microbes this would never occur. The earth would be cumbered with the dead bodies of past generations of animals and plants—undecomposed. And very soon all the organic elements, all the carbon and nitrogen, if not all the hydrogen and oxygen, on the face of the earth would be fixed in these corpses and the green plants would perish from the whole world for want of substance. For it is the green plants which feed on, and absolutely must have as their food, the carbonic acid, ammonia and nitrate, into which the microbes resolve all living things when dead. It is the green plants which from those simple compounds build up again the more complex molecules, the sugars, fats, albumens and proteids, and provide for the nourishment and increase of the most complex of all—the living matter hidden in protoplasm.

WOMANLY WISDOM

"Winter's done and April's in the skies,
Earth, look up with laughter in your eyes."

Always keep your flour cool, dry and securely covered.

You can generally save money by avoiding the dead-sure things.

Love what is good, support the feeble, fly the wicked, but hate no one.

To distribute spice evenly through a cake or pudding, carefully mix it with part of the granulated sugar to be used.

When frying potatoes, drippings, if they have been carefully saved, are as good as butter and much less expensive.

It is not generally known that candles, as well as soap, will last much longer by being exposed to the air for some time to harden before using.

When you wish to seperate eggs, break them, one at a time, into a small-sized funnel. The whites will pass through into the bowl below and the yoke will be left in the funnel.

Stiffly-starched muslin bags in which to put woolens in the spring will keep them unharmed by moths, if they are free from them whem put in and if the bags are tightly closed

A penny lies on our breakfast table each morning for the child who is there first, neatly washed, dressed and combed. It works better than a scolding for the one who is late.

Spread down some newspapers on which to kneel when you are planting the garden or flower beds. They may save you a cold or rheumatism in your knees, besides keeping your dress clean.

In looking over a lot of discarded clothing, I found a suit of men's clothes I ripped it up, pressed it carefully, and dyed it a pretty dark red. I found I had lots of goods to make a warm spring jacket for a girl of nine years.

For the close-line: Screw some strong steel hooks into the posts or trees where you wish to hang the line, slip rings over the hooks and see how nicely they work. You can take the line in every time very easily. All you have to do is to slip the rings off the hooks and wind the line up. Fix it up so and surprise the woman folks.

Last year we had excellent success in keeping hams in good condition through the warm weather. Before the flies had a chance to deposit their eggs in them, we dusted some cayenne pepper into the hock end, wrapped the whole ham closely in brown paper, then in coarse muslin sewed to fit closely. Lastly we gave them a coat of whitewash and hung them where it was cool, dry and dark, and they did not even mold on the outside.

To can asparagus: Tie it in bundles, each the size to fit in a jar, and cut off the stem end so that the bundles are an inch and a half shorter than the jar. Lay them in a saucepan, putting in the cut-off ends also. Boil until they begin to be tender, but not soft. Take out, untie, and fit into the jars ends down. Set each jar on a perforated board in a boiler. Put in the small pieces cut off; add a teaspoonful of salt for each bunch to the water in which they were boiled and divide it among the jars, filling up with boiling water till full. Put on the lids, but not the rubbers, pour on them hot water to the neck of the jar. Bring to a boil, and then with less heat boil steadily for half an hour. Take out one jar at a time, remove the top, put on a new rubber, after scalding it, and screw on the top. When all are done go over them and tighten the tops if needed. Set up side down in paper bags and put in a dark place. Keep standing on their heads and do not shake more than necessary.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Bellefonte Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that Backache pains come from sick kidneys.

'Twould save muchneedless woe.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Bellefonte people endorse this:

Mrs. H. I. Taylor, 72 S. Water St., Bellefonte, Pa. says: "We think just as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills today as we did two years ago, when we publicly recommended them. They were procured from Green's Pharmacy Co. and brought relief from bachacke and kidney trouble. On several occasions since then we have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and they have always been of the greatest benefit. We think so highly of Doan's Kidney Pills that we recommend them to other kidney sufferers at every opportunity."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Would Have Cost Him His Life.

Seeing at the Pole.

A person can see a greater distance from the pole than from any other point, because the earth is flatter there than anywhere else—that is, the curvature of the surface is less.

Feast of the Tabernacles.

The first recorded thanksgiving was the Hebrew feast of the tabernacles.

Newfoundland Fogs.

The oft mentioned fogs of Newfoundland are found only, as a rule, on the east and south coasts and on the "banks." They are caused by the meeting of the arctic current with the gulf stream. The interior in summer is described as a most delightful climate, resembling that of the south of France.

The New England Thanksgiving.

The New England Thanksgiving dates from 1633, when the Massachusetts Bay Colony set apart a day for thanksgiving.

Plant Roots.

It is from the rootlets or small fibers of a tree or plant that its subsistence is obtained, and in the performance of its duty nature has given these delicate, tender parts wonderful strength and persistence when exerted within rules. In their search for food supply they will sometimes even penetrate soft rock to reach favored spots.

Stuttering.

A German writer declares that stuttering can be cured by simply enforcing the rule, "Do not open your mouth till you are quite clear in your head exactly what you want to say."

Marathon Battlefield.

One of the most famous stories in ancient history is that 400 years after the battle of Marathon there were still heard on the battlefield the neighing of horses and the shouts of soldiers, and, apropos of this battle, Plutarch stated that several soldiers saw the apparition of Theseus there, fighting for the Greeks.

Walk-In-the-Water.

The Walk-in-the-Water, the first steamboat on Lake Erie, made her first trip from Flat Rock to Detroit in August, 1818, leaving on Sunday and arriving on Thursday.

The Ordeal Bean.

In Africa the calabar bean is called the "ordeal bean" and is used by some tribes as an ordeal in the trial of certain offenses, like witchcraft, larceny, etc., very much like sassawood. These ordeals constitute a phase of the African's administration of criminal justice.

Tower of Pisa.

After exhaustive research an English architect has decided that the leaning tower of Pisa was built at the angle it stands today as a feat of structural bravado.

The Hawaiians.

Besides the traditions of the Hawaiians, their practice of incantation and divination and many peculiarities of their language show a relation not only with the Hebrews, but also with the fire worshipers of Persia, the Brahmans and Buddhists of India and other branches of the Aryan race.

The Dolphin.

The dolphin is a weatherwise fish. During a gale or storm at sea the mariner knows that the end of it is near if he can see a dolphin or a number of that fish sporting on the waves.

Potted Plants.

The reason some people "never have any luck with plants" is sometimes because the drainage is defective. A plant will not live in a heavy, sour, soggy soil, such as fills a pot when the drainage is not complete. This is especially true of palms, to which the stagnant moisture is sure death, but it holds true of any pot grown plant.

Ostrich Feathers.

The beautiful and choice ostrich feathers are found only in the wings of that bird. It is rare to find more than a dozen of these fine feathers on one bird.

Persia's Orchards.

While Persia is generally famed for its roses and other beautiful flowers and its tastefully arranged gardens, its orchards, with excellent varieties of finely flavored fruit, nuts, melons, squashes, cucumbers, etc., deserve greater consideration. It is the home of the peach, a fact illustrated in the term for this fruit in many languages.

Moss Grown Steps.

To remove green and other stains from doorsteps, dissolve one ounce of oxalic acid in half a gallon of water and brush the steps with it, using a very stiff broom for the purpose. Then wash down with clean water.

Portrait Superstitions.

In many civilized countries strange superstitions exist regarding one's portrait or photograph. Thus among some classes of Germans it is said that if you have your portrait painted death is sure to follow shortly; also that a photograph imbibes your soul. The Russians say that if a silhouette is taken death results within the year.

Sugar In China.

Sugar has been eaten in China for at least 3,000 years.

The Russian Flag.

Peter the Great, it is said, borrowed the idea of the Russian flag from the Dutch, among whom he learned shipbuilding. He simply turned the Dutch tricolor, red, white and blue, upside down to make a Russian flag.

GERMAN CUSTOMS LAW.

It May Not Always Be Expensive, but It Does Take Time.

"If you travel in Germany you want to be careful to declare all dutiable goods at the border, even down to a toothpick," said a former attache. "It may not save you much money, but it will save you vexatious delays.

"With a friend I came over from St. Petersburg by way of Stockholm to Kiel on our way to Berlin. I had bought in Russia half a dozen gun metal holders for tea glasses, not worth over 15 cents apiece, and I had packed them in a Russian helmet. The latter had a spike on top of it.

"The customs officer at Kiel asked whether I had anything dutiable, and as the holders were of insignificant value I said 'No.'

"That did not satisfy him. He thrust his hand down into the bag roughly, and the first thing he came into contact with was the spike of that helmet. He jumped back, with a German oath, and then he reached down more cautiously, grabbed the spike and pulled the helmet up, the contents dropping out.

"'Aha! So!' he exclaimed in triumph, transfixing me with a look.

"Then he charged me with evading the law and with smuggling. He left us under guard, and there we stayed while we saw our train pull out. Finally the Herr Oberinspektor, in brilliant uniform and with sword clanking, came along back with him. He pompously inquired who we were. We explained.

"'I believe you, gentlemen,' he replied after some questioning and considerable deliberation, 'but you are amenable to the law and will have to pay the duty and a fine equal to the amount of duty.' Then he hurried away to get the articles appraised.

"We felt we had got into a mixup. We counted over the German money we had between us, and it amounted to less than $3. We had nothing besides but drafts on Berlin, and if the duty and the amounted to much we were in for all sorts of trouble.

"Finally the Herr Oberinspektor came back with a bundle of papers in his hands. He informed us that we could be liberated upon the payment of 60 pfennigs, which is about 15 cents. For this we had lost three hours."—New York Sun.

COSTLY ACCIDENTS.

A Lost Tin Mine and a Lead Mine's Bottomless Pit.

Immense plans which seemed about to be completed, but have been brought to disastrous failure at the last moment, are frequent enough in the history of industry.

London Answers tells the story of a tin mine in England which might have yielded a fortune but for a storm.

With the finding of a new vein of ore running out toward the sea a new level was driven out below the water; then it was found that the lode bent upward too near the sea bottom for mining to be safely carried on. Undiscouraged, the owner borrowed money, built a sea wall to cut off the water, erected pumps and again went to work.

On the sixth day, just as an enormous mass of rich ore was being tapped, a gale came up, a ship was blown upon the wall, which went to pieces at once, and the sea drove the heavy stones in upon the thin roof of the mine. In a moment the workings were hopelessly flooded and the owner was a ruined man.

A story equally tragic is told of the Speedwell lead mine in Derbyshire. Believing that a rich vein of ore existed in a nearby hill, the owner risked his entire capital to bore a tunnel 3,000 feet long into the heart of the mountain. Suddenly the miners broke through a wall of rock into a vast hidden cavern, through which flowed a stream of water.

They began to dump rock into the stream, and after 10,000 tons a bridge began to rise out of the darkness, and then their farther progress was stopped. Month after month they toiled, and at last, after 40,000 tons in all had been cast into the cavern, they gave it up.

That narrow rift is known to this day as the Bottomless Pit.

The Elements.

Of the seventy-one elementary substances of earthly matter enumerated by chemists thirty-two are known certainly to exist in the sun's atmosphere, ten or fifteen more can probably be traced there, and there are only six or eight as to which in the present state of our knowledge there is negative evidence that they are not present there. The elements whose presence is proved comprise many of those which are the most common in the composition of the earth, and the fact is pretty firmly established that matter is the same throughout all space, from the minutest atom to the most distant star.—New York American.

His Fair Mindedness.

"Why do you insist on reading that newspaper? It always seems to offend you."

"Because," answered Mr. Sirius Barker, "I believe in always looking at both sides of a question. I rely on that publication for arguments on the wrong side."—Washington Star.

In College.

Freshman—Rah, rah, rah! Rah, rah, rah! Rah, rah, rah! Sophomore—Is that kid stewed? Senior—No; that's "Tea" Smith, so called because he's the pup that cheers, but does not inebriate.—Cleveland Leader.

Some persons do first, think afterward and repent forever.—Secker.

Just a Fit.

In the Ex-Libris Journal an amusing anecdote is given of a man anxious for a coat of arms and fortunate in finding one. A secondhand bookseller bought at a country sale some 300 volumes of handsome but unsalable old sermons, books on theology and the like.

He placed a number of these outside his shop. Soon afterward a well dressed man entered and said, "Have you any more of this kind of books with this shield on them?" pointing to the bookplate attached, which bore the arms and name of a good old country family.

"That box, sir, is full of books from the same house," answered the bookseller.

"What do you ask for them?" inquired the man. "I'm going back to Chicago, and I want to take some books, and these will just fit me, name and all. Just you sort out all that have that shield and name, but don't you send any without that nameplate, for that's my name too. I reckon this old fellow with the daggers and roosters might have been related to me some way."

Picking a Horse.

A British cavalry officer, speaking of horses, said:

"Give me a free hand and I should pick a roan—that is, for good temper and quick learning. Dark grays and blacks are mostly strong and hardy, and so are dark chestnuts. As a general rule, light chestnuts and light bays are nervous and delicate. A rusty black's a sulky pig nine times out of ten. Then, again, there are 'white stockings,' as they call them. You know the old saying, 'One white leg's a bad un, two white legs you may sell to a friend, three white legs you may trust for a time, four white legs you may lay your life on.'"

This does not agree with an old Yankee saying:

One white foot, buy him;
Two white feet, try him;
Three white feet, look well about him;
Four white feet, go on without him.

Now, however, the American idea is similar to that of the sergeant, and they say, "Four white feet you can stake your life on him."—London Spectator.

An Ingenious Device.

When Sir Robert Perks' school days were over he entered the office of a firm of lawyers and worked very hard. It was no uncommon thing to find him reading law at 5 in the morning, and this often after he had been working late on the previous night. As a matter of fact, he made it an inflexible rule never to be in bed of a morning after 5. To enforce this rule he invented an ingenious device. This consisted of a long glass tube filled with water nicely balanced over his head and attached by a string to an alarm. At the desired hour the bell rang and awakened the sleeper. If within a few seconds he did not leap from his bed and avert the calamity the descending weight of the clock destroyed the balance of the tube, and down poured the water on his guilty head!—From "The Life Story of Sir Robert W. Perks, Bart. M. P.," by Dennis Crane.

The Limit.

There is a blacksmith who has a shop downtown and who has a reputation for good work, especially in the making of ice tongs. But he claims to be an expert on any kind of ironwork.

Recently a man dropped in on him while he was working on a pair of ice hooks.

"I see you are an expert on ice hooks," said the caller.

"Oh, yes! I make ice hooks putty good," remarked the mechanic, "unt I also shoe your horses or do other ironwork yust so good."

"Well," said the caller, "I've got a stove on which the hinges need repairing. Can you fix them?"

The blacksmith drew himself up to his full height and scornfully asked, "Do you think I am a dod gasted jeweler?"—St. Joseph Gazette.

The Comparison.

Dropping into the Garrick club one afternoon, Charles Brookfield, the dramatist, found a well known actor, who happened to be playing David Garrick at the time, reclining in a chair right under the portrait of the immortal "Davy." Brookfield stopped in front of him and looked first at the portrait and then at the man. "By Jove, old fellow," he exclaimed at last, "you grow more and more like Garrick every day!"

"Do you really think so, Brookfield?" returned the delighted victim.

"Yes," came the crushing retort, "and less and less like him every night."—London Tatler.

Unique American Families.

The Harrison family, like the Adams family of Massachusetts, on its illustrious genealogical tree carries the names of one signer of the Declaration of Independence and two presidents of the United States, and in this record the Adamses and the Harrisons stand apart in a class by themselves. These distinctions in one family, it can be noted, will never again be equaled. It remains unique in the history of the country.

An Eye to Safety.

Living Skeleton (president of Freaks' Secret society)—Our organization, ladies and gentlemen, is about perfected. It will be necessary, however, to elect a treasurer. Who shall it be? Chorus of Members—The legless wonder!

Cost of Living.

The price of beef, like the famous cow,
Will jump o'er the moon some day,
And the tariff on milk will take a leap
Clear up to the Milky way.
—Chicago Tribune.

The Usual Expression.

"How do these star convicted criminals attempt to excuse their delinquencies?"

"In the usual way. They say usually 'Pardon me.'"—Baltimore American.

Prosperity and Pride.

The farmer gay of cash, they say,
Is one of our great boarders.
He now prepares to put on airs
O'er this year's summer boarders.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Morrison and daughter, Eleanor, returned home on Monday after an extended visit with Mrs. Morrison's parents, at Birmingham, Pa.

Loine Hummel, a former Bellefonte Academy boy but now a student at the University of Pennsylvania, was entertained over Easter at the home of Miss Lucretia Williams.

Wallace White, of Axe Mann, received on Friday a portable well drilling machine from Beaver Falls, and is now ready to accommodate any person, who desire to have a first class well drilled.

William McFarlane, who is recuperating from his recent fall from an electric light pole, departed on Saturday for Lock Haven, the home of his parents, and where "Billie" hopes to convalesce more rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Maitland, daughter, Miss Louise, and son, Master Robert, stopped over in Bellefonte on Monday between trains. The Maitlands have just returned from a six weeks' tour in Debrio, Texas and Mexico, where Mr. Maitland sought a change of climate.

Among the Centre Countians who finished up their Easter shopping in Bellefonte on Saturday were J. C. Morris, of Rebersburg; Mrs. W. I. Gramley, of Spring Mills; Sherman White, of Curtin, and Mr. and Mrs. George Gilbert Pond and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Churchill, of State College.

After a pleasant visit with relatives at this place Mrs. Mary Cook, of Buffalo, N. Y., a sister of Mrs. Rachael Williams, of this place, departed on Tuesday for Atlantic City, where she expects to make her future home. She was accompanied by Mrs. Alice C Farrish, who will stay with her for a short time.

On Friday night, last, the mountains in the vicinity of Centre Hall were on fire. Fearing for the safety of the cabin, commonly called "The House of Lords," Edmund Blanchard, "Red" Lane and Homer Barnes hied themselves away in Dr. Sebring's automobile and became noble fire fighters. Owing to their herculean efforts, the fire never got closer than four miles to the cabin, but then, as Cap. Lane said, "A stitch in time is worth two in the bush."

Allen S. and Robert Garman, of Tyrone, and Ira D. Garman, of Philadelphia, were Easter visitors in Bellefonte. They had dinner at the Garman House and were very well pleased with Mr. Davis, the new proprietor of the popular hotel. They left Bellefonte feeling confident that the Garman House was in good hands. "Dick" Garman was on his way to Pittsburg where he attended a large banquet on Tuesday night, as the representative of the Pennsylvania Jewelers Association, of which he is president.

Argument court is scheduled for April 12th.

Gregg Curtin, an old Bellefonte boy, spent Easter with his parents here.

Burgess H. Laird Curtin, of Curtin, spent Easter with Bellefonte friends.

An infant child of Mrs. Bessie Mayes, on Logan Street, died on Sunday and was buried on Monday.

Miss Elizabeth Gephart gave a sewing party for a number of friends on Thursday afternoon, last.

Mrs. George Evans, of Lock Haven, is at the home of her sister, Mrs. Minnie Harper, who has been quite ill for several weeks.

Mrs. R. B. Freeman, of Tyrone, visited her daughter, Mrs. Hugh N. Crider, of this place, between trains on Saturday afternoon .

W. Hughes Barton, of Unionville, was a pleasant caller a day or two ago, dropping in to advance his subscription to "The Republican" another year.

George Minemyer, of this place, is temporarily located in Tyrone, where he is looking after some of the American Lime & Stone Company's operations.

While attending the Breon public sale, at Julian, last week, Reuben Alexander, a son of Mills Alexander, was kicked by a horse and sustained painful bruises to one of his hands.

Mrs. Thomas Shaughnessy went out to Pittsburg on Saturday, for a little visit with her son, Frank, who is making such gratifying progress with his position in the "Smoky City."

Mrs. S. E. Satterfield, who is a valued reader of "The Republican", departed on Tuesday for Philadelphia, accompanying Mrs. Thomas A. Moore, who had been visiting Bellefonte friends for a short time.

Professor F. Milford Pletcher, one of Blanchard's sterling Republicans, was a pleasant caller at our office on Saturday evening. He was accompanied by his brother, Ellis, of Ashtabula, Ohio, who is not quite so rotund but if anything is better looking than his big brother.

The Bellefonte Academy baseball team will cross bats with the Pittsburg Tech. to-morrow afternoon, at Hughes Field. The Academy boys have a strong team this year and are deserving of the liberal support of the Bellefonte sport-loving public. Do not forget the date, April 1st.

L. F. White, until recently residing at Pleasant Gap, was a business visitor to Bellefonte a few days ago and found time to call and mark his subscription to "The Republican" a year ahead. Mr. White and family this week moved their household goods to their new home, near Nigh-bank.

There has been quite an interesting family reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William McClellan. Their daughter, Mrs. Blair Yarnell, of Snow Shoe, and her husband, and also their son, Thomas, of Altoona, were home over Easter and it is needless to say that the fatted calf was killed and the visiting children had the jolliest kind of a time.

Clarence Haven, of Tyrone, the baggage master on the Snow Shoe branch, narrowly escaped being killed on Friday night, last. Mr. Haven was inspecting a moving freight train at Snow Shoe Intersection, which suddenly stopped and threw him over a steep embankment. Luckily he struck feet foremost, with the result than he only received a badly sprained ankle.

Edward K. Rhoads, the well known business man, has planned a little and well merited vacation. It isn't often that he places business affairs behind him, so that the proposed vacation will be all the more enjoyable. With his sister, Miss Rebecca Rhoads, he will start on Wednesday, of next week, for a two weeks' trip to the Bermuda islands. The climate there is so charming that the trip is sure to be most delightful.

Several days ago a visitor to "The Republican" office left word for us that, by happening to be out at that particular time, we had "missed a pheasant." For a time we were somewhat mystified and then it flashed over us that our visitor had been that genial veteran, Joshua R. Pheasant, of Mt. Eagle. We not only "missed a pheasant", but also a delightful chat, for Mr. Pheasant is one of those men of the old school who look upon the brightest side of life and find it possible to see something good in everybody. To be frank about it, this is pretty good religion for all of us.

The Philadelphia "North American" printed on Sunday the picture of Shem Spigelmyer, who is the father of G. R. Spigelmyer, of this place, with the following press notice, which is self explanatory: "This Mifflinburg, Union county, Pa., resident is said to be the oldest traveling salesman in Pennsylvania, perhaps in the world. He was born November 21, 1821, and started a store at Hartleton, in Mifflinburg, in 1843, which he conducted until 1876, when he removed to Mifflinburg and became a traveling salesman and has been on the road ever since, although in his 89th year. For thirty-four years Colonel Spigelmyer has continuously been on the road 'drumming up' trade."

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Murtoff spent Easter with friends in State College.

Miss Mary Sellers departed on Monday for a two weeks' visit with relatives in Altoona.

Miss Pearl Hollis, of Harrisburg, is visiting Miss Anne Cherry, of North Thomas Street.

Miss Marie L. White, of Williamsport, was the guest of Bellefonte friends over Easter Sunday.

Harry Cohn, who is employed at the Claster store, spent Easter with relatives in Lock Haven.

Miss Kitty Willard will entertain the Girls Club tomorrow night, at her home on North Thomas street.

Walter Rankin, of Philadelphia, spent Easter at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Rankin.

Harold Lingle, of DuBois, was an Easter visitor at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lingle.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd A. Musser and little son spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. William Musser, of East Lamb Street.

W. G. Ward, who is connected with the Park Hotel, of Williamsport, spent Easter at the home of his mother, Mrs. George Ward, of East High Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walkey have moved to their own home, on Bishop Street. Mr. Walkey's father will make his home with them for the present.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Hayes have concluded their stay at Aiken, South Carolina, and now are making a visit to Atlantic City before returning to Bellefonte for the Summer.

Miss Isabelle Young, of Dunn, N. C., and Mr. Walter Hoge McEntire, of State College School of Agriculture, were entertained over Easter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Meyer.

W. I. Fleming came up from Harrisburg to enjoy Easter with Mrs. Fleming and also plan a little in regard to their new home, on Spring Street, occupied until recently by Jacob P. Smith.

A number of friends and relatives gave Mrs. Ellen Garbrick a surprise party at the home of her son, Harry, in Coleville, on last Thursday evening, the occasion being the sixty-fourth anniversary of her birth. There were about 35 guests present.

J. Mac. Curtin, of Pittsburg, spent Easter in Bellefonte, stopping over enroute to southern points which he will visit in the interest of the Westinghouse Electric Company, with which concern he has been identified for a number of years.

Captain Hugh S. Taylor and several other Centre county soldiers are planning to attend the third annual reunion of the Fifth Regiment Spanish-American war veterans, which will be held this year at Indiana, Pa., on Wednesday and Thursday, April 27 and 28.

Wallace H. Gephart made a flying business trip to New York on Saturday, last. While he preferred spending Easter at home, pressing business demands of the Central Railroad Company, of which he is president, necessitated his going away.

J. P. Smith, of Spring Street, sold out his household goods on Saturday last at public auction. The sale was a success in every way. Mr. Smith has not decided definately just where he will move to. The Smiths are well liked and the community as a whole regret to see them leave.

Harry Walkey, who has been employed of late with the Bellefonte Electric Company, has resigned his position in order to take the clerkship with A. C. Mingle that was recently vacated by Israel Baum. Earl Kline, son of ex-Sheriff Henry Kline, will take the position with the Electric Company that was vacated by Mr. Walkey.

Miss Margaret Cook arrived home from Wellesley College for Easter, giving her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cook a pleasant surprise. They did not know in advance that she was coming and received their first intimation of it when she walked into the house. James B. Cook, of Punxsutawney, also spent Easter at the parental home.

Lincoln Musser has moved from the Potter House on Spring Street to one of the Schad brick houses on the same street. Mrs. William Laurie has moved into the Potter house, while Dr. Weston will move from the Collins house on the Hayes property, at the Fair grounds, to the house on Spring Street vacated by Mrs. Laurie.

Several days ago we received a four-column clipping, from the Detroit Sunday "News Tribune," of the issue of February 13, 1910, which gives a finely illustrated account of the growth of the Malena business, the founder of which, Chauncey F. York, is the son-in-law of Emanuel Noll, of this place. The article shows pictures of the new Malena factory, that has just been erected in Detroit, the palatial Detroit residence of Mr. York and also a picture of Mr. York's youngest son, Carlton York, starting the furnaces in the new factory. The article gives a complete account of Mr. York's early career and is as fine a compliment to his integrity and business methods as could be written.

Have you a prescription? Take it to Green's.

The Garman House dining room was very prettily decorated on Easter.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Strawn spent Easter with relatives at Scottdale, Pa.
